RESPONSE TO MOTION FOR REMAND

Date: September 22, 2008
Judge: Hon. Thomas Whelan

No Oral Argument

Defendant My Daily Sub, Inc. dba Subway Sandwiches #18347 ("Defendant") respectfully submits the following Response to Motion for Remand:

I.

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff is a prodigious filer of claims under the Americans With Disabilities Act ("ADA"); however, Plaintiff has no intent to pursue the federal ADA claims. Plaintiff filed complaints alleging federal ADA violations in the following actions:

| Case Name  | Case Number      | Motion for Remand Hearing Date   |
|--|------------------|--|
| Humphrey v. Lois P Mitchell; My Daily Sub Inc. dba Subway Sandwiches #18347, and Does 1 through 10, Inclusive  | 08cv1511 W NLS   | September 22, 2008   |
| Humphrey v. PCCP of SB Las Americas Owner LLC; Jockey International Global Inc.; Neiman Marcus Last Call; Ritmo Latino Inc.; Maidenform Inc.; Lci Holdings Inc. dba Liz Claiborne Outlet #324; Sunglass Hut Trading Corp dba Sunglass Outlet #4779; Motherhood Maternity; Stride Rite Childrens Group Inc. dba Stride Right Outlet #6050; Brooks Brothers; Sanrio Surprises; Guess Inc.; J Crew Factory Store; Perfume Outlet; Puma Outlet Store; Converse Outlet Store; Sunglass Hut Intl; Pvh Corp dba Calvin Klein #062; Kenneth Cole Catalog Inc dba Kenneth Cole Outlet Store, and Does 1 through 10, Inclusive | 08cv1640 L JMA   | None pending as case was removed on the same day as the filing of this Opposition. |
| Humphrey v. Wildrose Real Estate Corp., and Does 1 through 10, Inclusive   | 08cv1543 LAB JMA | October 27, 2008   |

These cases are against defendants who have properties situated in San Ysidro, California. Many of the defendants in the above-referenced actions are represented by the same counsel. Defendants properly removed these actions to federal court as Plaintiff's Complaint expressly raises federal claims, including claims arising under the ADA (42 U.S.C. § 12182 et seq.) and claims under the Unruh Act (Cal. Civ. Code § 51) that are predicated on the ADA.

1 After Plaintiff's excessive settlement demands were rejected, Plaintiff filed motions for
2 remand in two of the three above cases, and Defendants anticipate that a motion for remand will
3 be filed in the remaining case as well. The motions are nothing more than an attempt by Plaintiff
4 to manipulate the forum in which her claims are litigated. Plaintiff did not object to Defendant's
5 removal of this action until Plaintiff discovered that the defendants will not simply write checks
6 to get the lawsuits dismissed but, rather, would investigate and contest the allegations of ADA
7 violations.

8 Plaintiff's remand motion is specious. In her motion, Plaintiff claims that the Court lacks
9 federal jurisdiction because she filed a First Amended Complaint eliminating certain allegations
10 regarding her mental and physical impairments which she is required to prove to succeed on her
11 federal ADA claim. (Plaintiff's Memorandum of Points and Support of the Motion for Remand 12 at p.6.) In other words, Plaintiff claims to have dismissed necessary factual allegations from her 13 claims for relief, but not the federal claims.

14 Of course, Plaintiff cannot play fast and loose with the judicial system in this fashion.
15 Removal jurisdiction is based on the allegations of the complaint at the time of removal. A 16 plaintiff cannot effectuate remand by pointing out the flaws in her own case, in effect arguing a
17 claim she continues to plead should be dismissed. Nor, can a plaintiff "dismiss" certain key 18 allegations simply to get a remand granted, while keeping the federal cause of action in the case.
19 For these reasons and those that follow, Plaintiff's Motion for Remand should be denied.

20 II.

21 PROCEDURAL HISTORY

22 On or about June 27, 2008, Plaintiff filed a Complaint for Discriminatory Practices in 23 Public Accommodations, citing 42 U.S.C. § 12182 et seq., in the San Diego Superior Court.
24 Thereafter, on or about August 18, 2008, Defendants timely and properly removed the action to 25 this Court as it is clear from the face of the Complaint that this Court has federal question
26 jurisdiction. Plaintiff subsequently filed a First Amended Complaint on August 19, 2008. The 27 First Amended Complaint, like the original Complaint, raises claims under the ADA and cites to 28 42 U.S.C. § 12182 et seq. In her Motion for Remand, Plaintiff claims that her First Amended

1 Complaint eliminates allegations that she is “substantially” limited in life activities. (Plaintiff’s
 2 Memorandum of Points and Support of the Motion for Remand at p.6.) However, this is simply 3 not true. In Paragraph 7 of the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiff alleges that her “physical 4 impairments substantially limits [sic] one or more of the following major life activities.”
 5 (Plaintiff’s First Amended Complaint at p.2, ¶ 7 (emphasis added).)

6 After learning that Defendants would not immediately accept settlement demands,
 7 Plaintiff filed a Motion for Remand. The entire basis for the Motion for Remand is that Plaintiff
 8 intends to withhold evidence of an essential element of her federal ADA claim (that her
 9 disabilities substantially limited life activities). In essence, Plaintiff is claiming she has no 10 evidence of certain facts admitted in her pleadings simply so she can manipulate the forum for 11 this dispute. This Court should not allow such chicanery.

12 III.

13 REMOVAL WAS PROPER BECAUSE THE COURT HAS FEDERAL QUESTION 14 JURISDICTION

15 A. Jurisdiction is Determined at the Time of Removal.

16 “Any civil action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction founded on a claim
 17 or right arising under the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States shall be removable
 18 without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties.” 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b). Removal
 19 jurisdiction based upon a federal question is determined from the face of the complaint as it
 20 existed at the time of removal, not as subsequently amended. Libhart v. Santa Monica Dairy Co.,
 21 592 F.2d 1062, 1065 (9th Cir. 1979); Sparta Surgical Corp. v. National Ass’n of Securities
 22 Dealers, Inc., 159 F.3d 1209, 1213 (9th Cir. 1998). “Because of this rule, a plaintiff may not
 23 compel remand by amending a complaint to eliminate the federal question upon which removal
 24 was based.” Sparta Surgical Corp., supra, 159 F.3d at 1213.

25 Here, Plaintiff claims that the Court lacks federal jurisdiction because she filed a First
 26 Amended Complaint that removed certain allegations regarding her mental and physical 27
 28

1 impairments.<sup>1</sup> But whether Plaintiff removed certain allegations and/or evidence to support her
 2 claims is not the standard. The standard is whether the complaint alleged a federal question at the
 3 time the removal petition was filed. The answer to this question is unequivocally “yes.”

4 At the time that Plaintiff filed her Complaint and currently for that matter, Plaintiff raises
 5 ADA claims by directly citing to federal statutes. She also raises an Unruh Act claim that is 6 based on the ADA. Thus, there is federal question jurisdiction.

7 B. Plaintiff Cannot Compel Remand By Arguing Her Federal Case is Flawed.

8 “[P]laintiff should not be permitted to ‘effectuate remand by pointing out the flaws in her
 9 own complaint, in effect arguing for dismissal of that claim.’” Barracough v. ADP Automotive
 10 Claims Services, Inc., 818 F.Supp. 1310, 1311 (N.D. Cal. 1993) (finding that although plaintiff
 11 claimed in her motion for remand that her ADA claim was improper, defendant nonetheless had a 12 right to a federal forum because plaintiff asserted a federal claim when the complaint was filed).
 13 “A district court can consider whether plaintiff has engaged in any manipulative tactics when it
 14 decides whether to remand a case.” Carnegie-Mellon University v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 357
 15 (1987).

16 Here, Plaintiff claims that the Court lacks federal jurisdiction because she filed a First
 17 Amended Complaint that removes certain allegations regarding limits that she faces in life 18 activities due to her mental and physical impairments and, therefore, will necessarily lose on the 19 federal ADA claim. (Plaintiff’s Memorandum of Points and Support of the Motion for Remand
 20 at p.6.) In other words, Plaintiff asks the Court to remand this case because Plaintiff really 21 intends to lose on the federal claims she willingly pled.

22 Plaintiff’s argument should not be persuasive. Plaintiff alleged her physical and mental 23 impairments substantially limited life activities in numerous lawsuits, including those identified
 24 above. The doctrine of judicial estoppel prevents a party from playing fast and loose with the 25 courts by taking contradictory positions in the same or related proceedings. (See Rissetto v.
 26 Plumbers & Steamfitters Local (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 602–604.) Plaintiff cannot say

27
 28 <sup>1</sup> Despite Plaintiff’s contention that in filing her First Amended Complaint she removed allegations that she is “substantially” limited in life activities, such contention is erroneous. As mentioned above, in Paragraph 7 of the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiff alleges that she is “substantially” limited in major life activities.

1 remand should be granted her because she is not substantially limited in life activities, when she
2 has alleged just the exact opposite in numerous other complaints and lawsuits – including this 3 one.

4 Plaintiff is simply trying to manipulate the forum in which her claims are heard by 5 suggesting her federal claims will necessarily fail. This Court should not allow Plaintiff to 6 succeed in her scheme. If Plaintiff really believed her federal claims were improper at the outset,
7 Plaintiff never should have filed them. Plaintiff had obligations in state court under California
8 Code of Civil Procedure 128.7, and in federal court under Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil 9 Procedure, to make sure every claim and allegation she pled was supported in fact and law. She 10 also needed to make sure her claims and allegations were not filed for an improper purpose. (See 11 FRCP Rule 11(b) and Cal. Code Civ. Proc. 128.7, providing claims should not be asserted for an 12 improper purpose and factual contentions must have evidentiary support.) Plaintiff's suggestion 13 that she will not present evidence that she is "substantially" mentally or physically impaired and 14 therefore suffered harm under the ADA is essentially an admission that this factual allegation was 15 made in numerous lawsuits for an improper purpose (e.g., a settlement shakedown), or it was 16 unsupportable in all instances. It should go without saying, Plaintiff should not assert factual
17 contentions that are not true and she should not assert claims she has no intent to pursue simply to 18 harass defendants into settlement.

19 If Plaintiff filed sham allegations or claims in violation of California Code of Civil 20 Procedure Section 128.7, or Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, that is a huge
21 problem for Plaintiff. But, it is not a basis for granting remand. A plaintiff cannot simply point 22 out the flaws in her case or the unsupportable allegations in her complaint to effectuate remand.
23 Barracrough v. ADP Automotive Claims Services, Inc., 818 F. Supp. 1310, 1311 (N.D. Cal.
24 1993).

IV.

THE COURT HAS JURISDICTION OVER ALL CLAIMS RAISED IN THE COMPLAINT

“[A] federal court has jurisdiction over an entire action, including state-law claims, whenever the federal-law claims and state-law claims in the case ‘derive from a common nucleus of operative fact’ and are ‘such that [a plaintiff] would ordinarily be expected to try them all in one judicial proceeding.’ Carnegie-Mellon University v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 349 (1987) (citing Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725 (1966)). If a claim arising under federal law existed at the time of removal, the federal court has jurisdiction to adjudicate all claims even if the federal claims are dropped from the case and only state law claims remain. Nishimoto v. Federaman-Bachrach & Assocs., 903 F.2d 709, 715 (9th Cir. 1990).

In her remand motion, Plaintiff argues that the Court should decline to exercise jurisdiction over her state law claims because state issues allegedly predominate over federal issues. However, Plaintiff offers no explanation for her argument other than that her state law claims allow her to recover monetary damages, rather than merely injunctive relief. Plaintiff fails to point out that she pled claims under the ADA, that she directly cites to federal statutes in both the original Complaint and the First Amended Complaint, and that her state law causes of action are premised on the ADA. It is clear that the state law claims do not predominate over the federal claims because the entire Complaint and First Amended Complaint are centered around alleged violations of the ADA. Further, this Court has jurisdiction over both the state and federal claims as they all derive from a common nucleus of operative fact and are such that they should all be tried in one proceeding.

Plaintiff further argues that the Court should decline to exercise jurisdiction over her state law claims because they raise a novel or complex issue of state law. Plaintiff claims there is a conflict in state law because California Civil Code sections 52 and 54.3 set forth different amounts of monetary damages that Plaintiff may recover. However, California courts have made it clear that the two Civil Code sections do not conflict; they are distinct in that section 52 requires a showing of intentional discrimination, while section 54.3 does not. See Gunther v. Lin,

1 144 Cal. App. 4th 223 (2006). There is no conflict or novel issue of state law as Plaintiff
2 suggests; there are simply different standards that must apply to liability claims under these 3 statutes.

4 Lastly, remand should be denied because this Court's exercise of jurisdiction over
5 Plaintiff's state law claims accommodates the values of judicial economy, convenience, fairness
6 and comity. Plaintiff's state and federal claims derive from a common nucleus of operative facts.
7 All of Plaintiff's claims should be litigated in one forum, namely federal court.

8 V.

9 THIS COURT DOES NOT NEED TO ABSTAIN FROM HEARING PLAINTIFF'S
10 STATE LAW CLAIMS

11 Plaintiff claims that the Court should remand based on abstention principles. Remand 12 based on abstention principles is limited to cases in which the relief sought is purely equitable in 13 nature or otherwise discretionary (i.e., injunctive or declaratory relief). Quackenbush v. Allstate
14 Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 721 (1996). Thus, a federal court should not remand a damages action, 15 even if abstention is otherwise appropriate. Id. Here, remand based on abstention is improper as 16 Plaintiff seeks both monetary and non-monetary damages.

17 Moreover, the court should not remand when a plaintiff's federal claims remain intact.
18 See Hernandez v. Six Flags Magic Mountain, Inc., 688 F. Supp. 560, 563 (C.D. Cal. 1988).
19 Here, Plaintiff's federal claims remain in tact. Plaintiff has not dismissed the federal ADA claim,
20 even though she erroneously claims to have omitted an essential allegation to that claim. Even if 21 Plaintiff does not offer necessary evidence in support of this claim, the claim is still present in the 22 case at this point. Accordingly, remand based on abstention is improper.

VI.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, Defendant respectfully requests that the Court deny Plaintiff's Motion for Remand in its entirety.
